PRELATES

Gathered in Great Numbers to Celebrate the College Jubilee.

Rome Was Headquarters For Many American Church Dignitaries.

Function For Each Day and End Has Not Yet Been Reached.

MEET POPE PIUS X. TOMORROW

This was a gala week for the faculty and students of the American College at Rome. The celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of the college began on Sunday morning and continued throughout the week. The religious celebration was marked by great solemnity. Archbishop Farley, of New York; Monsignor Falconio and other priests and prelates that sailed on the steamer Carpatia on Ascension day did not reach Naples until Friday evening of last week. The Americans were warmly greeted by the Archbishop and clergy of Naples, where they spent Saturday and Sunday. On Monday they went to Rome. In addition to Monsignors Farley and Falconio there were in the party more than 150 Bishops and priests from America, all of whom were former students at the American College. Besides these there were a number of American Bishops, Archbishops and priests at the college who had arrived several weeks previous.

Among those who took prominent parts in the religious celebration during the week were Archbishop W. H. O'Connell, of Boston; Monsignor Kennedy, Bishop of Adrianople and Rector of the American College; Right Rev. M. J. Burke, Bishop of St. Joseph, Mo.; Bishop M. J. Hoban, of Scranton; Archbishop Farley, Monsignor Falconio and the Right Rev. Owen B. Corrigan, the new Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore.

There was a solemn Pontifical mass on Sunday, followed by another on Monday, and after the mass on Monday the visitors were entertained at breakfast by Bishop Kennedy and the college faculty. On Tuesday morning Archbishop Farley officiated at the solemn requiem mass for the late Cardinal, who died during the last half century. Bishop Burke, of St. Joseph, preached the sermon. Archbishop O'Connell, of Boston, officiated at the solemn mass of thanksgiving on Wednesday morning, and the sermon was preached by the Right Rev. Owen B. Corrigan, the new Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore.

The jubilee banquet was held on Thursday. Students past and present were there and with them were perhaps the largest gathering of Cardinals ever assembled outside the Vatican. Among them were Cardinals Merry del Val, Gotti, Sotillo, Vannutelli, Aglardi and many others. "The Pope" was the toast proposed by Archbishop Farley, and the United States by Archbishop O'Connell, of Boston. The banquet was held in the college refectory.

Yesterday the American prelates and many of the priests celebrated mass at the tomb of the Apostles in St. Peter's Cathedral. The ceremony will be a musical and literary entertainment at the college. Tomorrow all the students past and present and the members of the faculty will be received in audience by the Pope, and arrangements will be made to photograph the assemblage in the Vatican gardens. On Monday the visitors will take a trip to the college villa at Castel Gandolfo, where the new hall in honor of the alumni association will be dedicated and the association will hold its annual meeting. During the afternoon the priests and students will enjoy their national game of baseball. The celebration will close with a solemn "Te Deum" on Wednesday.

On all sides were heard expressions of regret because Bishop McCloskey, of Louisville, first President of the college, was unable on account of his advanced age to visit Rome during the happy jubilee time. Many American Catholic prelates also express regret on this account.

The Catholic Citizen of Milwaukee says: "It is too bad that venerable Bishop McCloskey, of Louisville, could not go with the American party to the golden jubilee of the American College at Rome. He was the first President of that college, and to have the first President at the golden jubilee of a college would be a rare and delightful occurrence."

The Catholic Sun of Syracuse said: "It is regretted that his age will prevent the venerable Bishop McCloskey, of Louisville, Ky., who was the first President of the American College at Rome, from attending the golden jubilee of the institution on June 15. He is eighty-six years old." And the Catholic Universe of Cleveland, Ohio, remarked last week: "It is somewhat phenomenal to find that the first President of an institution now celebrating its golden jubilee is still among the living and active in the performance of his duties. We refer to Right Rev. Bishop McCloskey, of Louisville, who was the first President of the American College in Rome. His age, however, will prevent the long journey to participate in the golden jubilee."

BLESSING OF BANNER.

The new banner recently purchased for St. Leo's Society of Highland Park will be blessed with due solemnity after vespers at 8 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The Rev. Father Denis Murphy, pastor of St. William's church, will officiate at the blessing and will deliver an appropriate sermon.

private sermon. The blessing of the banner is something new in St. Leo's parish and the pastor, the Rev. Father John J. Fitzgerald, invites the general public to attend. The banner is made of white silk and is handsomely trimmed in gold. On the front is a picture of St. Leo with a suitable inscription, and on the reverse side is embroidered in gold "St. Leo's Society of Highland Park."

THIEVES BUSY.

Police and Detectives Not Only Ones to Work Overtime.

The police and detectives were a busy lot this week and between appearing in dress uniforms and helping entertain visiting detectives they had no time to look out for thieves. When all accounts are in it will appear that the burglars were as busy as the police were entertaining, but the police headquarters is not letting it be known, that is unless someone else tells it.

John J. Maloney, one of the best known business men on Main street, and who resides at 324 West Breckinridge street, took his wife and family to see the Shriners' parade Tuesday night. En route home Mrs. Mary McFarland, a dressmaker, at 314 West Breckinridge street, told the Maloney family her house had been entered and plundered during her absence. Three silk dresses and a number of other costly garments had been surreptitiously swiped during the brief time that Mrs. McFarland was away.

Mr. Maloney and his family sympathized with the perturbed lady and moved home. The interior of their house looked like a cyclone had struck it. All the mattresses had been upset, drawers opened and contents strewn on the floor, closets and wardrobes ransacked and $200 worth of Mrs. Maloney's clothing and valuable silverware were gone. Mr. Maloney's new suit was left on the back of a chair. He thinks the burglars wanted to leave him a souvenir and certainly appreciates their good taste. He telephoned the police and detectives were sent to the scene. They made a cursory investigation and inquired for a list of missing articles. He went to the detectives' headquarters on Wednesday and furnished the list. In language more forcible than polite he was asked why he left home that night and did he have to go to see the parade. Cold consolation for a man that was robbed.

Edward Krieger, Jr., who resides at 1631 Bank street, was watching the progress of the fire at Avery's plow factory Monday afternoon. The crowd was very great and Krieger was about to leave when he saw a hand in his pocket and turned to confront a negro. He did not grab the pickpocket, he hit him. While the negro was getting away Sgt. Trinkle grabbed Krieger and was about to arrest him until Mr. Caldwell, Burnett, a well known young man who had witnessed the affair, expostulated and the policeman asked: "Why didn't you grab him until we got here? What did you want him for?" Meanwhile the negro went scot free and is still at large.

AFTER OFFICE.

Col. Daniel E. O'Sullivan For Commonwealth's Attorney.

Col. Daniel E. O'Sullivan, a native Kentuckian and for twenty-five years a resident of Louisville, has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Commonwealth's Attorney for this judicial district. Mr. O'Sullivan is a staunch and loyal Democrat and has served in the past as a member of the Board of Public Safety and as Assistant City Attorney. Prior to entering upon an active political career Mr. O'Sullivan was a newspaper writer and editor. He has always been a good fighter. He uses a rapier rather than a club when lambasting his enemies and never loses a chance to land a thrust where it will do the most good. If nominated and elected Mr. O'Sullivan will make a tireless and fearless prosecutor of evil doers.

BISHOP HEADS PILGRIMS.

The Right Rev. Bishop Kiely, of Savannah, and a party of American laymen and women will visit Rome during the latter part of this month. They will be received in audience by the Pope.

CATHOLICS

Save the State Many Thousands of Dollars Every Year.

Twenty-five Thousand Children Are Attending Their Schools.

Academies, Colleges and High Schools For Final Touch.

VARIOUS ORDERS EMPLOYED

Very few if any non-Catholics in the State have any idea of how many children are being educated in the Catholic schools, colleges and academies of Kentucky. If these children were educated in the city and county public schools the State would be put to an enormous additional expense. There are at present close to 25,000 of these children who are being educated without any expense to the State, and they are divided between the dioceses of Covington and Louisville. If these were turned over to the State it would entail a burden of nearly $600,000 annually on the taxpayers of Kentucky.

Instead the Catholics provide parochial schools wherever possible, pay their own teachers, provide for the care and education of the orphans, equip high schools and colleges and yet draw no benefit from the school fund to which they have to contribute their pro rata. In the diocese of Covington there are thirty-seven parochial schools educating 7,238 pupils. Besides that there are two high schools in the city of Covington with 222 pupils. Eight academies in the diocese take care of 1,449 young ladies, and 215 children are being cared for and instructed in the three orphan asylums.

The diocese of Louisville is more than twice as large as Covington, and has seventy parochial schools with 11,225 pupils; sixteen academies, with 718 pupils; sixteen academies for girls and young ladies, with 1,621 pupils, and three kindergartens instructing 145 little ones. Besides Louisville with its three Catholic orphan asylums cares for 272 parentless children.

In the diocese of Louisville there are several communities of men and women engaged in teaching the young. The Fathers of the Resurrection conduct St. Mary's College in Marion county; the Trappists have a college for boys at Gethsemane; the Franciscan Brothers teach the boys in St. Boniface's and St. Joseph's parochial schools; the Brothers of Mary conduct the boys' department of St. Martin's parochial school, Louisville, and the Xavierian Brothers conduct St. Xavier's College and St. John's school for boys in Louisville.

The Sisters of Charity, whose parent house is at Nazareth, in Nelson county, have branches in various parts of the diocese and send Sisters to many parochial schools. The Dominican Nuns, the Sisters of Mercy, Sisters of Loretto and the Ursuline Nuns are all doing their share toward the education of the Catholic youth of the diocese of Louisville.

In the Covington diocese the Benedictine Fathers and the Brothers of Mary are engaged in teaching boys, but the majority of teachers are from the communities of men and women. The Sisters of Charity, Sisters of St. Benedict, Franciscan nuns, Sisters of Notre Dame, Sisters of Providence, Sisters of Loretto and Sisters of the Visitation have the principal care of the Catholic children in the Covington diocese.

SEES THE EVILS.

Lebanon Editor Opposes Local Option For Reasons.

The Marion County Leader, an organ of the Republican party, sees the evils of local option as operated at Lebanon and wants respectable saloons permitted to open. The editor says in part: "The number of minors who have been seen drunk in Lebanon during the period of local option has far exceeded that of any like period under the saloon regime in the last two years."

"These are facts well known in Lebanon and Marion county, and are readily admitted by conservative people. Those who live simply opposed to the sale of liquor by license just as a cow is opposed to red, and can really give no more intelligent reason for their opposition than old brindle can give for her opposition to a milkmaid gaudily dressed in red of course live in realms beyond human reason. In their estimation they alone are right, and whatever may be the practical results of their theories they cut no ice for them. For instance, we oppose local option for the self-same reason that they favor it. Utterly motives are assigned to us, while their views alone must be accepted as unflinching by personal considerations. Our contention shows results in favor of our claims. Theirs show the very reverse of all that is claimed by them when put in practice, as here in Lebanon now, but we have to pay and pay dear for the whistle. For the sake of our boys we should go back to well regulated and licensed saloons. For the sake of those who drank before, but drink for county institutions are being made in Cork and Dublin. The Earl of Aberdeen under previous Liberal Governments filled the posts of Governor General of Canada and Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. He is back in the latter post now. Lady Aberdeen has given much of her time to the betterment of Irish industries.

"EL CAPITAN"

To Be Reproduced at the Masonic Theater Monday.

The Cecilian Choral Charity Club will repeat its performance of "El Capitan" at the Masonic Theater next Monday night. The two performances in May won many encomiums from the press, among them this from the Louisville Herald:

To the swinging strains of the incomparable Sousa music, "El Capitan" last night marched straight into the affections of the large audience at Masonic's, and was reported to the land of moonlight and snorriors, of revolutions and mantillas—Peru. To tell the truth, however, the audience was a most willing captive, and sat enthralled throughout the three acts of this most delightful comic opera—the masterpiece of the "March King"—as presented by the Cecilian Choral Club.

There is a thrill and stir about the Sousa music which sets it apart from that of all other composers, and in "El Capitan" this is much in evidence as well as some appealingly lovely songs and languorous, luring Spanish dances.

The scene of the opera is laid in old Peru—that is Peru in the Seventeenth century during Spanish possession, and there were alluringly graceful dancing girls, and drummer girls, haughty Spanish gentlemen, musicians and drunks, and such and such in a magnificent and colorful fashion, and were it not for the fact that the Seventeenth century is presumed to have been just a trifle early for the advent of the show girl, some members of the chorus last night would have been exceedingly curious and drilled in appearance, and danced and marched with such consummate skill that one might have fancied oneself present at the premiere of a Broadway musical comedy instead of an amateur performance. This was due to the fact that when it comes to producing a musical comedy in the hands of a troupe that every trace of amateurishness is lost, the Cecilian Choral Club is hard to surpass.

The really excellent work of the large and carefully selected cast, the snappy, gingery work of the chorus, the beautiful execution of the various dances and drilled in appearance, and the colorful beauty of the elaborate costumes all combined to make "El Capitan" one of the most delightful musical comedies of the entire season, either professional or amateur.

Though with such a cast and chorus "El Capitan" might afford to stand for anything from a holiday extravaganza to a Goldfield mining camp, and still be successful, it is yet true that the opera possesses a logical and clear-cut plot, and as presented last night, it was acted unflinchingly throughout, and the breeze of gaiety never failed, while the flag of fun was fluttering from the rising until the fall of the curtain. The stage managers of "El Capitan" were Messrs. John J. Flynn, Thomas E. Evans and M. Tello Webb. Prof. Leo A. Schmitt was the musical director, and Philip Hager, master of dances, Miss Gertrude Simpson, accompanist, while the personnel of the cast was as follows:

Don Errico Medigna.....John J. Flynn
Senor Amabile Pazzo.....Oello Webb
Don Luis Cazarro.....Wm. J. Imorde
Contra Tenor Hernandez de Verrade.....

SACRED HEART ACADEMY.

The Ursuline Sisters and their pupils have issued invitations to the annual commencement exercises of Sacred Heart Academy at Crescent Hill, which will be held in the academy auditorium at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, June 16. A happy feature of the occasion will be the presentation of the historical drama, "Joan of Arc," which has been artistically arranged by a member of the faculty. Recitations, essays and vocal and instrumental music will fill out the programme. The alumnae association held its triennial meeting on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon.

BISHOP CONATY IN ROME.

Bishop Conaty, of Los Angeles, has left Rome after having received a second time by the Holy Father, to whom he presented his brother, Father Bernard Conaty; his sister, Miss Conaty, of Taunton, Mass.; his cousin, Miss Lynch, Miss McDermott and Miss E. M. Byrne, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Murphy, Miss Synnot, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hampton and Miss Ray, of Los Angeles. The Pope also received in private audience Archbishop Hank, of New Orleans, and Monsignor Kennedy, Rector of the American College, who presented Da Race, of Washington University.

BINGHAM ANNOUNCES.

Hon. Robert W. Bingham, former County Attorney and Mayor of Louisville, on Wednesday last announced his candidacy for Mayor subject to the action of the Democratic convention which will be held Friday, July 2. Mr. Bingham is a talented attorney and his friends believe he can unite all factions of the party.

BUDGET

Of Interesting Gossip About Persons in the City of Owensboro.

Mayor W. M. O'Bryan Proposes to Decorate His Office.

Knight of Columbus and Y. M. I. Councils On the Boom.

PROMINENT YOUNG LADY DEAD

One hears frequently, "Are there any Irish or Catholics in Owensboro?" Yes, indeed! The people think so much of the Irish down there that they have one of them for Mayor, Hon. W. M. O'Bryan. He is making a good Mayor, too, and if it were constitutional they would re-elect him at the end of the present term. Concerning Mayor O'Bryan the Owensboro Inquirer said a few days ago:

"Almost anything is considered fair in politics, and especially in Owensboro politics, but the indications are that the present Mayor is going entirely too far. As some people may have guessed, Mayor O'Bryan is Irish, he subscribes for the Kentucky Irish American, cut potatoes, wears shamrocks on St. Patrick's day, smokes a clay pipe and swears occasionally. However, it has never occurred to him until recently to give his office an emerald hue. He now contemplates purchasing a green carpet, papering the office walls with green paper and a shamrock border, erecting a Blarney stone outside one of the windows, importing some shillelals and doing other Irish tricks. On the surface this looks like patriotism, but scratch the scheme and you find the real motive. The Mayor well knows that his Teuton friend (?) Meisenheimer could not afford to accept a nomination which might land him in such surroundings."

Owensboro Council, Knights of Columbus, is flourishing. The house committee is doing excellent work in furnishing the new home, and from present appearances every room in the house will be handsomely equipped before fall sets in. Prof. John Cooney, Lecturer of the Council, is rendering valuable service in the way of affording entertainment at the various meetings, and has a wonderful helper in Dr. John Gary, who can recite poetry or render musical selections.

Sarto Council, Y. M. I., is keeping the young folks of Owensboro busy. A euchre, a steamboat excursion and a comic opera are on the bills for the next few weeks. During the summer months the business meetings of the council will be as brief as possible to allow the young folks time for social pleasures. A piano and pool table are to be placed in the club rooms.

Mayor O'Bryan went to Henderson last week, where he was an honored guest at a meeting of the State Association of Stationary Engineers. Both the Knights of Columbus and Y. M. I. councils have organized baseball clubs, and the members enjoy the sport.

Miss Mary Aud, one of the best known young ladies in Owensboro, died Saturday morning. She had been ill several weeks and suffered from brain fever. She is survived by her mother, Victoria Ann, and two brothers, Rook and W. E. Aud. The funeral took place from St. Paul's church Monday and the Rev. Father Fitzgerald paid a deserved tribute to the memory of the deceased.

LADY ABERDEEN

Tells New Yorkers of War in Ireland Against Consumption.

Lady Aberdeen, wife of the Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, reached New York Saturday and on Sunday evening delivered two lectures, one at Plymouth church in Brooklyn and one at the New York Catholic Club. On Monday she went to Boston and later in the week to Canada. While in New York she talked to newspaper men about her mission, the attempt to stamp tuberculosis out of Ireland. "This campaign in Ireland, which was started more than a year ago," Lady Aberdeen said, "is mainly in the hands of the Women's National Health Association."

"The association maintains 100 branches," said she, "and is sending two exhibit wagons around the country in charge of doctors who speak Irish as well as English. The doctors explain the methods of prevention and cure by the latest standards. The Irish press has called attention to the terrible mortality figures. The Irish people are furnishing 12,000 victims a year, chiefly the young and promising, and the infection has a grip upon 120,000 of the population. Against a wet climate, a low dietary and a scanty fuel supply," Lady Aberdeen went on, "the poorer people have sought warmth by shutting off ventilation from their miserable abodes. The results have been lamentable. Whole families have perished. Nor does the disease confine itself to the very poor. People fairly well off have suffered from mistaken treatment, which did not help the sick and exposed the well to the germs of infection."

Three sanitariums have been established—the National, at Newcastle, in the mountains of Wicklow; Forster Green Hospital, in Belfast, and the White Abbey. Preparations deeper now, we should back to well regulated and licensed saloons. For the sake of those who never drank before local option, but who drink now, we should back to well regulated and licensed saloons. And secondarily only, for the sake of tax-ridden people and as a relief from that terrible business depression that has hung like a great pall over our town for nearly three years, we should back to well regulated and licensed saloons."

PASSIVE

All Would Rather Win Birrell Bill Than Vote On Budget.

Millionaire Permits His Journal to Make Attacks On Irish.

GOVERNMENT STILL HAS TENURE

The members of the Irish Parliamentary party are maintaining a passive attitude as between the British budget presented by Lloyd-George and the Birrell bill, says T. P. O'Connor, and since he is writing from London he should be in a position to know. The Irish members think that while the budget would be a bad loss, Birrell's bill would be much more serious.

"In Ireland they are all up in arms against the whisky tax as a blow at an industry which is not flourishing and which is one of the few industries left in Ireland and I trust some relief may be granted under this head. But meantime the whisky trade in the small saloon has not suffered. By putting a penny additional on the glass of whisky the saloon-keepers are getting 7s and 4d additional on each gallon of whisky sold; while the tax is only 3s 3d. And so unanimous is the action of the publicans in this respect that one saloon-keeper in Belfast who refused to raise his prices had his windows smashed by his indignant comrades in the trade. What really oppresses Ireland in the new budget is the high license on small saloon-keepers. It is a blow at the few who make a living, but Lloyd-George is in friendly negotiations with the Irish members on this point and I believe there will be a deal fair to all sides."

Mr. O'Connor also writes that the Dublin Daily Independent has been trying to exploit the budget to make war on the Ministry and the Irish party. "The Daily Independent is the property of William Murphy, a millinaire street car proprietor, who is the chief backer of the Independent. He and his dearest object always has been to make war on John Dillon and other leaders of the present Irish party. Tim Healy himself made a violent speech at a meeting of saloon-keepers in his constituency, and at one moment seemed inclined to try to put himself at the head of the anti-budget movement as a new army of revolt against the Irish party. But though the exasperation of the small saloon-keepers is still a factor to be counted with, the revolt will perish like so many others, for the Irish party will get such concessions as will relieve the situation."

Mr. O'Connor says: "Furthermore legislation is announced which certainly give good ground for another session of Parliament; and even some is mentioned which will give equally good ground for another session later on. All this means that the Government does not content for the moment with a template for the constituencies, and looks forward to two or three years more of office."

"Perhaps if Ireland it might be better that there should be a general election a little earlier, as was provided that Birrell's land bill had passed into law, but we can always get some reform for Ireland out of a Liberal Government, and we may be able to exploit the next two years to advantage for Ireland. Anyhow I think this prospect of the passage of a Liberal Government for two if not three years more will have a most beneficial effect on the Irish landlords; for they want their money badly and they know that if they do not fall in with the proposals of Birrell they may go further and speed worse."

"And curiously enough the budget, which at first seemed an insurmountable obstacle to the progress of the Birrell bill, has turned out to be one of the factors making in its favor. For Lloyd-George's fragile frame can not be expected to stand the strain of every night for months defending his budget; and relief is to be given him by interpolating the Birrell bill between the stages of the budget. The landlords are getting more reasonable; the Government is getting stronger, and mutiny is in its last gasp; and therefore I feel confident that the end of this session will see the land problem practically settled so far as legislation can do it, and the road clear for an upward and onward spring toward the settlement of the national question."

ST. ANN'S SCHOOL.

The closing exercises of St. Ann's parochial school will be held in the school hall at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday evening, June 22. Tickets are being sold at twenty-five cents. The Rev. Father John T. Hill joins with the pupils in inviting the public to attend.

SISTER OF CHARITY DEAD.

The requiem mass for the repose of the soul of Sister Charitina, who died at Owensboro last Saturday, was celebrated at St. Paul's church in that city on Monday morning. The remains were taken to Nazareth, where the interment took place Monday afternoon. Sister Charitina was a well known teacher in the order of the Sisters of Charity of Nazareth, and previous to entering the religious life was known in the world as Miss Anna Vaughan.

LIKE A PRINCE.

Big Tim Sullivan, of New York, Gave Lavish Trips On Steamer.

A special cable to the Chicago Tribune thus chronicles the arrival of "Big Tim" Sullivan, of New York, who is now in Europe:

"Timothy D. Sullivan's movements since reaching this side of the water have been of a whirlwind order. He landed at Queenstown, where a perfect tidal wave of letters and telegrams met him, many of them from Dublin. Sullivan has gone thither, and it is reported he saw Richard Croker, who had returned a day or two before to his country place in the vicinity of that city. Then Sullivan came to London, arriving at the Savoy at a weird hour in the morning. An immense suite was reserved for him there, which kept him only a few hours before he darted off for Paris. He still retains the suite, and is expected back in a few days."

Sullivan was the prince munificent on the Mauretania coming over, and Frank Daniels, the royal hufon. Between them they kept everybody interested and amused. The flowers, completely filling the lifeboat, which were put aboard the steamship as it was leaving New York harbor, were distributed by him in huge bouquets to every one of the 400 saloon passengers and to the humble steerage passengers bound for the "old sod" who happened to bear his name. The Senator's trip to serving people on the steamship were simply bewildering, and estimates placed the total at a large sum.

"Rumors have been started that Sullivan and Croker have had some sort of consultation on political subjects, but there is no tangible basis for these."

LAI D LOW.

Cold Hand of Death Fell Upon Charles D. Goepper.

Charles D. Goepper, one of the most popular citizens of Louisville, died at his home, 815 South Fourth avenue, Monday night. He has been ill about a year and a half, and for about a week before his death all hope for his recovery was abandoned. His funeral Wednesday afternoon was in charge of the Elks and Red Men, and both bodies turned out in large numbers to follow his remains to their last resting place in Cave Hill cemetery.

Mr. Goepper was born of German parents in this city forty-nine years ago. After receiving his elementary education in the Louisville public schools he graduated from the University of Indiana at Bloomington. For several years he engaged in the mercantile business in Louisville and then became chief deputy under County Clerk George H. Webb. He retired from the County Clerk's office to become cashier of the Phoenix Brewing Company, and at the time of his death he was Secretary and Treasurer of the company. He was also Secretary of the Louisville Brewers' Exchange and of the State Association of Kentucky Brewers. Mr. Goepper was active in the councils of the Liederkreis Society, the Elks and the Red Men.

He is survived by his wife and three children, Walter, John R. and Elizabeth Goepper, and a brother, Emil Goepper. The deceased was a splendid mixer and made friends on every hand. The community lost a favorite son in the death of Charles Goepper.

GOES TO COLORADO.

The Rev. Father Joseph P. Valley, O. P., has been appointed pastor of St. Dominic's church, Denver, to succeed the late Father O'Neil. Father Valley is well remembered in Louisville as a former pastor of St. Louis Bertrand's church. Recently he has been Prior of the Dominican convent at Newark, N. J.
